To Whom It May Concern:

As the COVID-19 pandemic continues to evolve in the United States and abroad, an increasing number of states, counties, and cities are implementing stringent guidelines to ensure our health and safety. As a general matter, these guidelines require individuals to stay at home or at their place of residence except as needed to maintain essential services for the public. While the list of essential services may differ slightly across jurisdictions, refuse, transit and transportation services are largely exempt from shelter-at-home restrictions. Because Agility’s work is critical to maintaining continuity of operations in these sectors, Agility intends for its facilities nationwide to remain operational.

We have received numerous letters from our customers and suppliers confirming the essential nature of the services we provide. Specifically, companies in the waste collection, sanitation, transportation, and logistics sectors have all provided Agility with letters reiterating the critical role that we play in protecting public health and safety. Whether supporting the effective removal, storage and disposal of residential and commercial waste or enabling trucks to deliver life sustaining medicine, food and other critical items, our business is essential to maintaining a healthy and well-functioning society.

In accordance with federal and state guidelines, we have instructed employees that are able to work from home to do so. To ensure that we maintain the safest possible workplace, we will also be implementing additional cleaning and social distancing protocols at each of our production facilities.

We look forward to the day when COVID-19 is no longer a threat. Until then, please take care of yourselves and your loved ones. We will get through this together.

Seung Baik
President, Agility Fuel Solutions